THE TEST:

You will be given a multiple-choice test at a computer terminal. Your score on this test will be used to determine your place on an eligible list. You must achieve a score of at least 70% to pass the test. The multiple-choice test is designed to assess the extent to which candidates have certain skills and abilities determined to be important to the performance of a Child Protective Specialist. The multiple-choice test will include questions which may require the use of any of the following skills and abilities:

Work Prioritization: Skill in prioritizing work tasks and ensuring that critical tasks are done in a timely manner, while not losing sight of other tasks. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability to plan and organize multiple work tasks, and to adjust that planning in response to changing work demands.

Reading Comprehension: Skill in reading comprehension in order to understand written sentences and paragraphs in work-related documents. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability when reviewing a court order concerning a client's child abuse case.

Writing Skill: Skill in writing to communicate effectively in writing as appropriate for the needs of the audience. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability when drafting a progress note documenting a home visit or creating a Family Assessment Services Plan (FASP).

Information Ordering: Ability to follow a rule or set of rules necessary to ensure that documents and client interactions are completed according to procedures. The rule or set of rules used must be given. The things or actions to be put in order can include numbers, letters, words, pictures, procedures, sentences, and mathematical or logical operations. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability when initiating the steps to remove a child from a home due to allegations of child abuse.

Deductive Reasoning: Ability to apply general rules or information (e.g., case management practices, case history) related to specific problems to come up with logical answers. It involves deciding if an answer makes sense. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability when assessing the physical home environment and conditions of one or more children, such as checking for properly stocked refrigerators, window guards and proper sleeping arrangements, to determine if it is an appropriate setting for children.

Inductive Reasoning: Ability to combine separate pieces of information (e.g., family dynamics, client background, health status or history, services received, corroborating information from multiple sources), or specific answers to problems, to form general rules or conclusions. It involves the ability to think of possible reasons for why things go together. Example: A Child Protective Specialist may use this ability during a home visit, when through direct observation and/or communication with the caregiver(s) or children, he/she discovers that there are challenges the caregiver(s) are facing in supplying basic necessities for the children, such as difficulties paying for childcare, rent, and/or food, leading the Child Protective Specialist to refer the family for additional services.

Certain questions may need to be answered on the basis of documents or other information supplied to the candidates on the date of the multiple-choice exam.
